RESEARCH HIGHLIGHTS Journal of Public Economics

Palmer, Caroline, David C Phillips and James X. Sullivan
(2019). Does emergency financial assistance reduce crime?
Journal of Public Economics, 169, 34-51.

Financial assistance reduces criminal behavior among those experiencing negative income shocks, such as job loss. By exploiting a quasi-random variation in how temporary financial assistance was allocated to eligible individuals, researchers found evidence indicating a decrease in arrests one to two years after the initial call. Results were particularly notable for violent crime, as arrests for individuals receiving funds were 51 percent lower than among callers who were eligible but did not receive funds.
