Abstract The great port of Surat in western India dominated accounts of Indian Ocean trade between the late sixteenth and mid eighteenth century. John II had so painstakingly prepared. Consideras que os dois autores têm opiniões semelhantes ou divergentes sobre os índios? With this information in hand, the Dutch finally made their move in 1595, when a group of merchants formed the Compagnie van Verre and sent out their first expedition, under de Houtman, to the East Indies, aiming for the market port of

José Maria de Sousa Horta e Costa

Many fleets also brought small supply ships on outward voyage. This talk presents some methodological approaches that may be useful in order to find original and later copies of unknown medieval documents in 18-19th centuries fonds at the Torre do Tombo, which documents can either complement any given historical research or raise new questions.
