New Insights into Sacred Tradition

Indeed, we take the unbudging and non-negotiable position that no people is more sacred or holy, or chosen or elect, or worthy of respect than our own. It is also the interrelated order of rightness established at creation, involving three interrelated realms of relationships: the Divine, nature and human society.

New Liturgical Movement: The “Solomon of Naples”

Any form of existence, however corrupt and whatever poor fruit is born, still lingers with the good.

Moreover, the Apostle here refers to the scriptures which Timothy was taught in his infancy.

Our Original Rising in Ancient Egypt: Defining the Sacred and the Moral Life

As most traditional Orang Asli and Malay houses are made of only wood, bamboo, rattan and woven palm leaves being built without using a single nail, the remains of those houses crumble easily into its surrounding.
