New Confucianism 新儒家

By 639, however, the system was again abandoned after much opposition. After Li Chengqian was deposed, Emperor Taizong briefly promised Li Tai that he would be made crown prince. In 630, Emperor Taizong sent his general against the , defeating and capturing their Ashina Duobi and.

Li

Li Yuan subsequently changed Li Shimin's title to Duke of Zhao. Emperor Gaozu, hearing that Dou had decided to come to Wang's aid, ordered Li Shimin to withdraw, but Li Shimin sent his secretary to Chang'an to explain to Emperor Gaozu that if he did withdraw, Wang would recover and again be a major threat in the future. The main goal in new Confucianism is to pursue sagehood in daily life.

Shu

In territorial extent, it covered most of the territories previously held by the and parts of modern , , , and regions.

Li

Emperor Gaozu therefore did not carry out the plan. The first of these campaigns was launched in spring 647, with and Niu Jinda in command, and would reoccur.

Emperor Taizong of Tang

Taizong's eldest son chose to speak Turkic, dress in Turkic clothes and even set up a tent in his residence in imitation of a Turkic khan. Xu, Gao, Zhang each of whom would be later made chancellor were not again referred to as chancellors until they were made chancellors after Emperor Taizong's death, even though they were not explicitly removed. He also launched a series of of the , and of their main ally, the.

Li

Emperor Taizong issued an edict to Yinan that he and Li Simo keep their peace and not attack each other, and after receiving from Yinan the assurance that he would not attack, the Turks advanced to the new location.
