She was tutored at home until she was nine and had almost no contact with other children except for her much older siblings. But she chose the more stable businessman, although the two poets remained close the rest of their lives.

Vachel Lindsay's Traveller

He mixed verse with prose, wrote illustrated poems, and experimented with a semiotics of design. They concern getting the thought of the writer, and the oral reading contemplated is only a test of whether one got the thought or not. New Criticism, with its emphasis on a careful reading of the text and its belief in the heresy of paraphrase and the affective fallacy, considers the written text as the sole locus of meaning.

The Chinese Nightingale Poem by Vachel Lindsay

He ventured out into the world on walking tours of the countryside, taking no money with him, instead trading his poetry for food and shelter. .
