Standing upon the south- ern edge of the escarpment one stands also on the threshold of Morelos.

Tepoztlan: A Mexican Village, American Anthropologist

The state of Morelos lies upon the southern escarp- ment. It may be of iron and brought from the city, or it may be a homemade copy 1 Cf. This is the characteristically Mexican garment worn almost everywhere and by every class except the highest.

Nahua Peoples

There is a great deal of travel among the villages of Morelos, and nearly all of it is travel on foot. It maintains pres- tige, presides at public meetings, and receives the sal-utations of visitors.

Nahua Peoples

The hair is worn in two braids, or, particularly by girls and young women, in a single braid. It consists of a municipal council consejo municipal , embracing one chief officer presidente and eight assistants ayu- dantes , a secretary, and a judge juez. The revolution which began in 1910, especially in Morelos, may be regarded as the conflict between two social-economic systems: the one an ancient Indian tradition of self- sufficient and independent villages enjoying corporate land tenure, and the other a new capitalistic system of large-scale production of a money crop contribu- tory to a world-economy.
