The growing of plant varieties characterized by less water demands heat-wave- and drought-tolerant crops should be propagated, in particular in areas of periodic water shortages, as well as effective irrigation methods. This has led to problems of soil erosion caused by winds blowing across the treeless land.

Poland Agriculture, Information about Agriculture in Poland

Whereas in the early days of serfdom in Poland, the peasant might have been required to farm less than three weeks in a year for his lord, in the 16th century, a weekly service of 1—2 man-days became common, and in the 18th century, almost all of a peasant's time could have been requested by the lord, in extreme cases requiring a peasant to labor eight man-days a week per 1 of land farmed by a peasant's family for their own needs the land belonged to the landlord, which in practice meant that the male head of the family worked full-time for the lord, leaving his wife and children working on the peasant's family land, and even then they had to help him occasionally, unless a peasant hired additional workers poorer peasants.

Serfdom in Poland

According to historian Edward Corwin the year 1496 marks the proper beginning of the serfdom era in Poland. Therefore, the Polish agriculture may suffer more from climate change than the agriculture in most EU countries of a different agriculture structure 3.

Local governments, too, have been using central government grants to plant trees along streams and creeks to establish a biological barrier between fields and surface water.

Agriculture in Poland

In the EU, consumers look for products that adhere to a wider set of quality standards than just food safety. For Librarians: Integration of your institutional LibKey profile with CAB Direct is very quick and easy! Especially important is establishment of a well-developed, competitive network of suppliers of materials and equipment necessary for modern agricultural production. .

Agriculture and Horticulture

Over time, more peasants became dependent on feudal lords. A water management strategy for agriculture, therefore, needs to be developed that focuses on demands for irrigating field and fruit crops, and industrial plants.
