Solidly based in academe by virtue of his or her scholarly credentials and career, this person has also developed expertise in alternative or appropriate dispute resolution.

Bringing Peace into the Room: The Personal Qualities of the Mediator and Their Impact on the Mediation

Often the disputes that we deal with in mediation trigger feelings in us about conflicts in our own lives. Anger is the cardinal emotion attached to conflict.

Qualities of an Effective Mediator

Very interesting to think how mediators can be trained to know themselves and use all their skills much like psychoanalysts are trained through their training analysis to manage and have insight into their personal reactions so that they can be open to the situation their clients bring to them and as unhampered as possible by their own personal prejudices. The pracademic is frequently called upon to help resolve particular disputes and can help identify sources of problems among the many layers of organization found in an academic setting. Rasouli v.
