A review of thrust faulting in the Eastern Cape Fold Belt, South Africa, and the implications for current lithostratigraphic interpretation of the Cape Supergroup

Identity and comparison The occurrence of sub-circular terminal sporangia on mostly isotomously dichotomizing axes points towards the genera Aberlemnia and Sporathylacium. Age and distribution Cooksonia cambrensis has been identified in the Pridoli of Wales , and the Lochkovian of England ,.

These are very short and measure 1. In this plant, sporangia are globose and borne on axes strongly widening just below them.,.

Lithostratigraphy and sedimentology of the Middle Devonian Tra

In places, dichotomies seem to occur, but they result from the superimposition of axes.

Lithostratigraphy and sedimentology of the Middle Devonian Tra

Dichotomies seem to occur more or less isotomously but branching is relatively difficult to interpret in both specimens. Although, morphologically very close to T.
