There is a separate forum for Street Furniture traffic lights, street lights, road signs etc. Why they work is unclear, but it is most likely related to their visual system

Cattle grid

Canadians use pit gate, vehicle pass, and Texas gate, as well as cattle guard, which in Canada refers mainly to guards at railway lines.

A major advantage is that this material is highly resistant to the elements; however, one disadvantage to consider in a concrete cattle guard design is the weight, which could result in higher shipping costs. So, what is a cattle grid? The main alternative would be a neoDarwinian speculation of doubtful plausibility.

Materials depend partly on what travels over the guards; grids that carry logging and mining trucks must be strong. Ranchers have told me that herds not previously exposed to real cattle grids will avoid the fake ones.

In this case, painted grids should have worked all along, and ranchers need not have used real grids in the first place. There have been proposals by the National Trust to install one on Harrison's Drove at Wicken Fen, which would be lower than this but still above sea level, but as far as I know it hasn't happened - there was a lot of local opposition. Because cattle have an instinctive fear of falling and injuring themselves especially their legs , creating any obstacle in their path will likely deter them from moving forward.
