The B

The bombing attacks were so accurate and successful that, in a little over a year, Haynes and his fellow pilots had sunk approximately a million tons of Japanese shipping. Haynes, who flew low-altitude night radar strikes against Japanese shipping in the South China Sea, and daylight raids against various enemy land based installations in eastern and central China. The bombing attacks were so accurate and successful that, in a little over a year, Haynes and his fellow pilots had sunk approximately a million tons of Japanese shipping.

This same radar technique was used by B-17's during the saturation night bombing raids over Germany. Authors Feuer and Haynes also show the personal side of the war.

The B

Instead this is a personal narrative of a guy who is flying the B-24 in China.

Haynes flew secretly developed B-24 Liberator bombers that were equipped with radar which had been integrated with the Norden bombsight for night missions. Forward fields were primitive- night-time air raids could interrupt sleep as men ran for trenches.
