Such knowledge is of course important; but a deeper sense of the value of participation to the community and the learner lies in becoming part of the community. It concerns the process by which newcomers become part of a community of practice.

Sociocultural Theory of Learning in the Classroom

In the discussion of memory and thinking that constitutes Chapter 3 of Mind in Society, Vygotsky stipulates that radical transformations take place in the relationships between psychological functions as a result of such mediated psychological activity.
