Invasion 3

Without direct air support, and short of ammunition, Brigade 2506 ground forces retreated to the beaches in the face of the onslaught from Cuban government artillery, tanks and infantry.

Invasion 3

The CIA transported people, supplies, and arms from Florida to all the bases at night, using transports. He did not specify the type of aircraft or what specific roles they may be called upon to perform, though he said they were not intended for combat. With the brigadistas in disorganized retreat, the Cuban Army and militiamen started to advance rapidly, taking San Blas only to be stopped outside of Girón at about 11 am.

Invasion 3

The anti-Castro effort depended on the success of these aircraft.

Invasion

Both the Blagar and Barbara J returned at midnight to land more ammunition, which proved insufficient for the brigadistas. Germany allows the usage of military installations on its territory for the intervention in Libya. Eight rockets apparently hit the compound of a senior government official, in an area where NATO confirmed operations had taken place.
