XIV Modern Literature

The levels range from a primitive, egocentric orientation at Level I through disintegrative processes leading to a higher integration characterized by authenticity, altruism, and universal values at Level V.

Internet Encyclopedia of Philosophy

One might seek to include freedom as a basic human interest, but freedom is not constitutive of our interests on this account.

Curriculum & Leadership Journal

Classroom management is a precondition for student learning. Section three considers the philosophical concept of a human right and analyses the formal and substantive distinctions philosophers have drawn between various forms and categories of rights. These self-reflection skills are learned implicitly when the toddler's parents provide the freedom and the security necessary for spontaneous play.

Theory of Culture

Is there something behind the appearances, something boundless and infinitely spacious, something in which the dance of change and impermanence takes place? A, , Polish Neo-Pagans represent a small minority on the Polish religious landscape and frequently rely on new media, especially the Internet, to maintain contact.

Theory of Culture

Their respect for historical reality, in all its concrete particularity and material detail, is evident.
