知解を求める信仰 ; われ信ず

If the current paragraph is too shallow to not mislead readers then perhaps the quotes, with references, and further discussion should be put back into the article? The article deals with theses of Martin Hengel from 1979 which are annexed to the article Zur urchristlichen Geschichtsschreibung. Hij was tot de conclusie gekomen dat het anders zou moeten; dat hij opnieuw zou moeten beginnen.

知解を求める信仰 ; われ信ず

A less anecdotal process would be to check and count their citations, but again my preference would be to keep any list like this out of the article itself and just include the works as we use the relevant ones and establish some context.
