Dancing in the No

Like tightrope walkers negotiating new terrains, we were caught up in the thrill of beckoning horizons.

Dancing in the No

The pool people -- 24. There is a place where a non-profit agency arranges for homeless people to live in an abandoned swimming pool, where a 12-year-old diabetic boy works in a shoe factory to buy insulin, where a woman who was once an engineer now defends her property with a Kalashnikov, and where a musician continues playing Beethoven's Sonata in G-minor while missile strikes light up the night. As she flits from meeting to meeting with her prewar Iraqi contacts, she intersperses descriptions of post-Saddam Iraq with recollections of the prewar period.

Review of Dancing in the No

I arrived at the prison looking like the avenging sister of a prisoner and the Marines watched me like a hawk.

Dancing in the No

The way that war and conflict get temporarily erased by delusional, shimmering moments of hope, before someone sends the wine back, and it starts up all over again.

Dancing in the no

Soon he would be mainly writing op-eds for the Independent, which had gone digital. The climax of the tour was a trip to the old death chamber, where Karpinski ceremoniously lowered the hanging platform, where so many had died.
