KING'S FUND REPORT ON LONDON'S MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Table 29x shows ratings by profession and Table 30x shows ratings by managerial roles.

Mental Health and Stigma

This data comes from the FRS. Service changes and adaptations Participants in crisis and community services were asked whether services they worked in had changed opening hours or locations, and how their practices had changed Table 15x. The Scottish Core Survey Questions pools demographic data from a range of surveys, to provide estimates of variability within smaller populations.

Data and evidence

In each setting, there were also reports of conflicting or unclear guidance. The 2018 Annual Participation Measure for 16-19 year olds can be found. The NHS productivity challenge: experience from the front line.

King's Fund report on our impact

And as The Point of Care Foundation also notes, there is evidence to link staff satisfaction and morale not only with patient experience but also with clinical quality and productivity The Point of Care Foundation 2014. Also every national missive focuses on investment in additional staff be that for numbers on wards or seven-day working.

Integrated health and social care in England

It offers a comprehensive overview of substantial changes to policy and governance structures in London and nationally, and probes the special challenges posed by London's population.

However, staff give a very clear warning that there are still important technological, social, and procedural barriers to be addressed, and that its use should remain selective, complementing rather than replacing face-to-face contact. The report also recognised that our current strategy directly addresses a number of the recommendations and issues raised by the report.

The King's Fund responds to the Care Quality Commission's State of care report

We have a choice between a future in which there is greater centralisation and control of the NHS and social care services, or a health devolution approach which incorporates national entitlements and targets but embeds the delivery of an integrated NHS, social care and public health service within broader, powerful, democratically led local partnerships.
