34 Lost Cities Forgotten by Time (with Map & Photos)

The fourth factor was the railways and postal service; it became easy for communal leaders to travel, communicate and build networks beyond their place of residence. If caught, they were heavily fined and their books were confiscated.

Mansura, Sindh

During his reign, many Shia scholars came to Bengal and started teaching in 'maktabas', mosques and imambaras. Most of the early Keralites started to make a living by brewing and selling tea to shopkeepers.

Mansehra

Mesa Verde Mesa Verde, in southwestern , is home to the famous cliff dwellings of the ancient Anasazi people. Humayun in Kabul was visited by a cleric Shaykh Hamid who angered the king by asking him why so many of his soldiers had Ali in their names?. It is in total contrast to the Shias of the Middle East, who enjoy a local majority in their homelands because they were compelled to in the medieval period because of persecution, and because of this demographic resource, they have become important political players in modern times.

Sheedis

Shia Islam has long history and deep roots in the subcontinent. Khaled Ahmed argues that it is because the owners of the media houses and the manpower employed there is overwhelmingly Sunni, and that there is a 'sense of shame' that stops them from openly talking about the problem. With Afghans out, Shias of Punjab started to take out processions.

Incredible lost cities we've rediscovered

The 1347—1526 AD in the , had its capital in Gulbarga and then Bidar in ruled by a dynasty of Persian origin. At that time, Kurram Militia was employed in Kurram Agency, they successfully contained this violence.
