Top 10 Flies for Lake Erie Steelhead

When the egg hatch is massive, fresh-run steelhead cannot ignore their urge to feed, especially since spawning might be five months away. They are a noble species, out classing their Salmonoid counterpart, and unlike the Chinook salmon, they are not here on the spawning run which is why they are so special and eager to snap at our swung flies.

A Great Lakes Fly Fishing Primer by Jerry Darkes

What very few anglers realize is that the Great Lakes are also world-class fly fishing destinations. Polarized glasses cut the glare off the water and help you see the fish and your lure.
