Date of Announcement	Regulatory Move
December 1979	Tender system for sales of treasury notes was introduced
December 1980	Ceilings on interest rates offered by trading and savings banks on deposits were removed
August 1981	Minimum maturity on trading bank certificates of deposit was reduced from 3 months to 30 days
March 1982	The minimum period for which trading banks may offer fixed deposits and certificates of deposit was reduced from 90 days to 14 days for amounts of $A 50,000 and over and from 3 months to 30 days for fixed deposits of under $A 50,000
March 1982	Savings banks were authorized to offer fixed deposits of less than $A 50,000 for terms of 30 days to 3 years
June 1982	Effective July 1, authorized money market dealers were allowed more flexibility (that is, could hold up to 30 percent rather than 20 percent of gearing limits) in the composition of the noncommonwealth government component of their portfolios
June 1982	The Loan Council decided that: (1) a tender system would replace the tap system for selling commonwealth treasury bonds; (2) the power to determine the terms and conditions of Australian Savings Bond issues would be delegated to the treasurer; and (3) major electricity authorities would be freed, in respect of their domestic borrowing, from Loan Council controls
June 1982	With effect from the end of June, quantitative controls on trading bank lending were discontinued
August 1982	Effective August 31, the 40 percent "prescribed assets ratio" imposed on savings banks was replaced with a 15 percent "liquidity ratio"; in addition, savings banks were allowed to invest up to 5 percent of deposits in assets (other than fixed assets) of their choice
July 1983	Loan Council controls over the domestic borrowing of larger local authorities were discontinued
December 1983	Effective December 12, the Australian dollar was allowed to float freely, and exchange controls were largely dismantled
