Nearly 50% are of no religion

In an important study published in 1987, a group of professors from the Universities of Georgia, Utah, and Wyoming found that the main cause of problematic adolescent sexual behaviors and attitudes is not only family dynamics and processes, as previously thought, but the absence of religious behavior and affiliation. Among these are Judaism, Sikhism, Daoism, and Jainism, followed again by another set of less consistently or more regionally accepted ones such as Bah ā ' ī, Shint ō, Candombl é, African Traditional Religions ATR , Scientology, and so forth. Persons who abuse alcohol rarely have a strong religious commitment.
