Symphony No. 2 In B Minor / Symphony No. 3 In A Minor (Unfinished) /

The Andante — utilizing flute and harp — invokes the spirit of the bard Bayan, much as Smetana used the harp to instantiate his national poet, Lumir. The Moscow woodwinds own this movement, supported by firm playing in the sting basses, cellos, and horns.

Symphony No. 1 in C minor, Op. 68 (Johannes Brahms)

Three consecutive movements in basically the same meter rarely occur in symphonies, , or of the most important Viennese composers.

Schubert: Symphony No 8

The music opts for lyric beauty rather than Russian declamations, although a brassy urgency comes to the fore. The first movement, marked allegro moderato, opens with a mysterious, sad beginning for celli and double bases, marked pianissimo very quiet.

Symphony No. 2 In B Minor / Symphony No. 3 In A Minor (Unfinished) /

The strength of Brahms' symphonic convictions is everywhere apparent, and his instinct for the scope and power of the form directly descended from Beethoven of whose Fifth Symphony three-shorts-and-a-long rhythm Brahms was not loath to invoke repeatedly. Two blaring chords introduce the twittering Scherzo in F Major.

Schubert: Symphony No 8

Par for this particular ABA form, the opening material makes a triumphant return.
