Perception Vs Reality

Who knows what time and space are, I suppose that I don't believe that time moves forward linearly, even though it appears to do so. The answer is, because popular culture has no values; it's amoral. Hence, VH applications that balance cultural context, interaction, and immersivity can lead to enhanced cultural learning.

Augmented Reality and Virtual Reality in School Education

Perceptions are, of course, real things they are things that occur inside our minds or brains or consciousness however you want to say it. This could be achieved by adding digital content to our view of the physical environment or by virtually erasing some parts of our view.

Quantum physics: Our study suggests objective reality doesn't exist

The accessibility can be realized in a form of virtual reconstruction, simulation, or virtual museums.
