Nazim Hikmet

He won the World Peace Prize the USSR's equivalent of the Nobel in 1950. The poet evidently never lost his faith in social justice. Because of you I don't let death enter, clothed in the softest garments, and knocking on my door with songs calling me to the greatest place.

Don Quixote poem

But be sure that, my love, if some pitiable gypsy's hairy black spider like hand slips the rope around my neck, to see the fear in my blue eyes they'll look in vain at Nâzım! Now the blue-eyed giant realizes that there is not even a grave of loving giants: marble in the middle of the garden honeysuckle in the house that opens its door Nazim Hikmet poetry the second poem Walnut tree My head is a cloud, inside the sea, I am a walnut tree in Gulhane garden, a knot is knotted, an old walnut tree is sighing. For any literature project, trust Poetry for Students for all of your research needs. Look at your face from shave to shave, forget your age, watch out for lice and for spring nights, and always remember to eat every last piece of bread-- also, don't forget to laugh heartily.

Nazim Hikmet

Published in celebration of the poet's one hundredth birthday, this exciting edition of the poems of the Nazim Hikmet 1902-1963 collects work from his four previous selected volumes and adds more than twenty poems never before available in English. Because of you, even my loneliest nights smile like an Anatolian kilim on your wall. Koyun gıbisin kardeşim, gocuklu celep kaldırınca sopasını sürüye katılverirsin hemen ve âdeta mağrur, koşarsın salhaneye.
