Birmingham City Centre

In building for change, we have key internal HR specialists who have organisational re-design capabilities that adopt lean systems thinking into practical reality.

Trojan Horse: A New Play

The tallest building visible is the tower of NatWest bank. In the next ten years the figure for King's Norton rose to over £1,000, but this large figure is probably to be explained by the size of the parish.

Statue call 'divisive and dangerous', claims councillor

Although an improvement on its predecessors, the new force does not seem to have been an unqualified success: in less than two years over 1,000 men passed through it though the total strength was never as much as 400, and 358 men were dismissed. It was particularly ambitious, given the silo based and change resistant culture.

Mayor to discuss vaccine in the BAME community

Birmingham City Council to sell the NEC

Another Improvement Act in 1861 enlarged the powers conferred in 1851. While these allegations remain unproven and long-drawn-out disciplinary proceedings against teachers were eventually discontinued, their impact has been significant. In 1945 the City Council began to pay the museum an annual sum to enable it to increase its collections; some going to augment the collection of old masters.

Political and Administrative History: Local Government and Public Services

Good news for our candidate in the constituency Bad news for the Labour MP Gisela Stuart who I actually rather like.
