Tom Loftus: The American League's Forgotten Founding Father

The very large square structure in the upper left quadrant of the photo is HyVee; the church would have had its back towards Illinois. A week after being elected to the board, the three met in the Hotel Julien in Dubuque, Iowa, to discuss their plans to develop a reputable league to rival the NL. Loftus left behind a legacy of deep personal friendships and mutual respect for the men who built major league baseball in its first 27 years.
