Khaki and Blue: A Killer Combination

Also, it would need to be almost a size too small so as to not look heavy. Rod Stradling noted in the latter's booklet: Written by John J.

Blue and Khaki

This recording was published in 1975 on the Topic anthology of countryside songs from Southern England,. This recording was published a year later on his Topic album. But according to Steve Gardham in the Mudcat Café thread , the reference to Blockley as the author can't be verified and there is no known original of the song.

The Khaki and the Blue / The Scarlet and the Blue / The Old Militia Drum / The Ploughboy (Roud 163; TYG 32)

An earlier recording by Rod and Danny Stradling from 8 July 1969 was included in 1998 on his Musical Traditions anthology. Roy Harris sang The Scarlet and the Blue in 1979 on his Fellside album. For I'm getting tired of country life And the place where I was born, So I've been and joined the Army and I'm off tomorrow morn.

Khaki and Blue — Linda V Wright

This is another song that the Watsonsons got from Mick Taylor of Hawes in 1965. Trees in the Tuileries and on the Quai are changing from green to red and gold. No more to work in the harvest fields, No more to cart the corn, For I've been and took my shilling And I'm off tomorrow morn.

Khaki and Blue: A Killer Combination

And no more will I go harvesting Or gathering the golden corn, 'Cause I got the good king's shilling And I'm off tomorrow morn. Five minutes from my house.....
