Now, whether this be a sincere Way of arguing, I will appeal to any other Judgment but theirs. The burial-grounds, the tree, and the pit Piraunui, were alike deeply tapu—sacred—in ancient times; nor even now is the recollection of the tapu entirely gone; old Te Hata-Kani, whose recollections go back some eighty years, and to whom I am indebted for many of these old-world legends, was most circumspect in his perambulations, and though he said nothing, scrupulously forbore to tread on consecrated grounds.
