Rabies cases have gone way down thanks to vaccination of domestic animals; they can't wipe out the disease that way, but they do provide a major buffer between humans and the wild reservoir -- most human rabies is transmitted from an infected domestic animal, so vaccinating them prevents that. Construction projects are complex, both in terms of the rights and obligations of the employer and the contractor who will carry out the work, but also in terms of what will physically occur on site. A drug is a poison.
