These recent roads were probably of more use than those by Wade, fifty years before this salutary measure of a wise legislature. From the wife's observation, as well as from the dialect of the beggar, we may infer, that there was little difference between the Northumbrian and the border Scottish; a circumstance interesting in itself, and decisive of the occasional friendly intercourse among the marchmen. David Wilson says that the land here is much better and easier cleared than when he was in Nova Scotia.

We shall find ample cause for lasting regret in the consideration of the more public aspects of the loss we have sustained. Notwithstanding that, the whole Roman world, if you will except a few Pagans, and the chief commanders in those days, were Christians, as appear'd after his death, where the Empire, with consent of all, was given to Jovian, a Christian.
