The background of Gray's Elegy : a study in the taste for melancholy poetry, 1700

It is this Approbation which makes it unnecessary for me to make any Apology but to the Author: As he cannot but feel some Satisfaction in having pleas'd so many Readers already, I flatter myself he will forgive my communicating that Pleasure to many more. The poem, as existing in the form of Eton College manuscript, contains only 22 stanzas including those four concluding stanzas which were later omitted from the expanded version. Melancholy in this everyday context may lack the intensity of artistic experience, but its refined harmony is no less a significant aesthetic feature.
