A review of selected congressional cost analyses

The indeterminacy of plans can lead to uncertainty in cost estimates in several ways. Over the coming years, the Congress will need to make decisions about what nuclear forces the United States should field in the future and thus about the extent to which the nation will continue to modernize its nuclear forces.

About two-thirds of the costs would be incurred by DoD. There can also be uncertainty about the costs of operating new weapon systems as they are phased into the force. The estimate of cost growth applies to the full 10-year period, and the difference between the current and previous estimates cannot reliably be divided into overlapping and nonoverlapping years.

Cost

This report 1 summarizes the characteristics of 121 weapon and IT programs, 2 examines cost and schedule measures and other topics for these same programs, and 3 summarizes selected organizational and legislative changes.
