European Union and comparative framework

COVID-19 made the fragile labour market arrangements of migrant carers visible, which may create new health risks for both the individual carer and the population.

Migrant Women

The sample of those interviewed included naturalized migrant women, legal residents, and the unauthorized. To my knowledge, most experiences in support of women re-entering the labour market have been those programs which focus primarily on returnee professional mothers. Early in the period studied by Penninx and Roosblad, immigration started in the countries of North-Western Europe.

VIOLENCE AGAINST REFUGEE WOMEN: HANDBOOK FOR PROFESSIONALS & TRAINING MANUAL

The RAND Corporation is a nonprofit institution that helps improve policy and decisionmaking through research and analysis. Legal status and integration appears to be a state achieved by struggling against barriers, utilizing the means on offer, and taking advantage of the positive channels opened up by official policy. Increasing unemployment in the southern EU countries and in Ireland may promote further intra-European circular mobility in coming years.

Integration of migrant women in the EU Labour Market: challenges and opportunities

The primary sector has shrunk to insignificance.

Trade unions, immigration and immigrants in Europe revisited: Unions' attitudes and actions under new conditions

Diminished membership is most marked in the private sector, while rates of unionization in the public sector remain generally higher Visser,. But there are also unsolicited migrants in search of economically better or politically safer destinations for whom new and increasingly onerous barriers have been erected.

Trade unions, immigration and immigrants in Europe revisited: Unions' attitudes and actions under new conditions

Working towards solutions for practical problems also implies an awareness of the strategic importance of the broader social context for union activism.
