Fellowship

The rooms 3x60 seat and 1x30 seat were fitted out using different furniture and technology solutions to test ideas for a new learning and teaching hub due for completion in 2019. The physics department moved from having small group tutorials six students with one tutor to using this space with 150 students at a time working in groups to solve problems.

Undergraduate Study

Project management The university set out to maximise stakeholder engagement from the start but it was not always easy to get the desired level of engagement, particularly from academics. MOTIVES AND BEHAVIOUR There is surprisingly little evidence as to the behaviour associated with different motives. Generally, students will only be entered for the Higher Tier if they have consistently demonstrated that they are capable of achieving a strong grade 5 or above, although every tier decision is made on an individual basis.

The rooms are spread across the campus and vary in capacity.

Privately funded higher education providers in the UK: The changing dynamic of the higher education sector

The design includes features such as adjustable benches and fume cupboards in every lab. All the rooms encourage active learning. It has sometimes been challenging to reflect this in the booking system, eg one room has a capacity of 36 if using fixed PCs but 50 if doing other forms of group work, so the university has put considerable thought into coding and classification on the booking system.

The Act however provided a distinct improvement in the quality and quantity of industrial training and established stronger working relationships between employers and colleges. Partnership working There was a very strong emphasis on partnership working throughout the project and this has continued into active use.
