Wykeham Books

Bookplates of Princeton and Princetonians. At 3×4 inches, they have plenty of room for your signature and a short message. What I see as the College of Arms tradition of process-produced plates is sound heraldically, but one could wish for a little less chastity of design and more exuberance, not least in the matter of mantling.

The motto indicates that Industry Follows as a consequence of Science. Firms of heraldic stationers flourished, and it is ironical but understandable that the period of most widespread ex-libris usage witnessed also the nadir of artistic panache. One item of extreme interest- the Samurai and its feudal culture, which were heavily recorded in paintings, woodblocks, etc.
