New England Convention

America agreed, and Madison sent a delegation of John Quincy Adams, James Bayard, and Albert Gallatin.

HARTFORD CONVENTION

But the hope of reelection is prolific of temptations, under which these magnanimous motives are deprived of their principal force. Such is the general view which this Convention has thought proper to submit, of the situation of these States, of their dangers and their duties.

What was the purpose of the Hartford convention

Knopf, 1970 ; Alfred H. New England was suffering from the sea blockade imposed by the British in 1814.

Hartford Convention

They met in secret because they wanted to discuss the problems faced by New England and the possible secession of the New England states from the union of the United States. Delegates from Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island convened in Hartford from December 15, 1814 to January 5, 1815. The Hartford Convention By 1814, the New England region perceived that they were disproportionately affected by the war.
