Farm Workers and Immigration

I know that a healthy, robust global market drives economic growth in rural communities. There are two to three million farm workers, including about 800,000 persons who work for wages sometime during each year on California farms. The authors of this volume analyze actors who are struggling to construct alternative food systems in harmony with humanity and nature.

Farm Workers and Immigration

Getting an education in a rural community was a great challenge. Taylor saw the combines that replaced migrants during the 1920s as a way to reduce the appeal of radicals in rural communities.
