Audubon Missouri

The head is so full of symmetry, and so beautiful, that I shall have a drawing of it to-morrow, as well as careful ones of the feet. Baldwin attributed much of this to man made activities, including the introduction of non-native predators such as the mongoose. Working with valued partners, we have pioneered conservation efforts in wetlands, prairies and bottomland forests in support of the more than 400 species of birds that call Missouri home.

Welcome to I

Everywhere, bird after bird boomed; they were all males. Participating ranches must also meet Audubon standards related to forage and feeding, and environmental sustainability.

State Office and Local Chapters

This has resulted in increased funding not just for the federal duck stamp program — but indirectly for the breeding program at Slimbridge, as well.

Up the Missouri with Audubon: The Journal of Edward Harris

Bell fired at a bird, and a large Wolf immediately made its appearance. Schwartz would come home... to find the skeleton of a mink, a cat or a pigeon stewing in her best saucepan, it was hard for her to think of using the same pan to cook up a batch of greens. Audubon, a hunter himself, worried that over-killing of bison was already beginning to threaten the existence of bison in 1843.

Welcome to I

On June 24, 2020, the I-Share catalog and your local library catalog moved to a new system called Primo VE. After graduating from Berkeley, Baldwin accepted a job with the National Park Service and moved to the Big Island of Hawaii where he served in various capacities as a biologist and park ranger.

Up the Missouri With Audubon; The Journal of Edward Harris by McDermott, John Francis, Editor: Very Good Hardcover (1951)

Unfortunately, the local breeding program got off to a rocky start. As Audubon traveled by boat up the Missouri River, he listed birds he could see, hear, or shoot from the boat. There he would detail their habits as he painted them.
