As a consequence the army would regain some influence in politics. The language of is seldom used in Indonesia - in distinct from other countries of the world. Advocated an independent judiciary, the implementation of a wide range of local autonomy and religious equality, improve the population quality.

Politics of Indonesia

This opened the way for an anti-systemic challenger to attempt to break the democratic system through authoritarian or illiberal means. Soon, however, this hope was dashed. A military officer who wanted to become active in politics would have to resign from his military position first.

Reformation

The 575 DPR parliamentarians are elected through multi-member electoral districts, whereas 4 DPD parliamentarians are elected in each of Indonesia's 34 provinces. But this diverse composition also implied a lack of cohesion within the cabinet and, moreover, it contained few reformers.
