The Sound of Gunfire: A decent debut from Tavish

After all, people voted Labour out for a reason.

Caron's Musings: Willie Rennie's conference speech was a failure.....

This has been presented in the media as some kind of imperialist plan for partition, with some justification. Unfortunately the narrow focus on the Northern Isles did little to further localism more widely and therefore in some respects this motion represented a missed opportunity to examine the difficulties of many of Scotland's diverse rural communities. The new Scottish Lib Dem leader Tavish Scott made his first speech since getting elected to the federal party's conference in Bournemouth just now.

Nicola Sturgeon branded 'reckless and irresponsible' over SNP independence pledge

It will be harder still to get the Conservatives to implement its recommendations. Those things are essential, but they should go without saying. This posting is not the entire sum of my response.

The Sound of Gunfire: A decent debut from Tavish

We are turning around an economy which Labour nearly drove off a cliff.

Are we a party that supports Northern Isles separatism?

What they do NOT enjoy is confidence in anything this Government says or does.

Blog: 'Sunshine strategy' at Scottish Lib Dem conference

It has always been the special inheritance of our party, and our party has always been at its most successful when we have fought for that ideal heart and soul.

Sir Ed Davey to address the Scottish Liberal Democrat conference

But then the Welsh Labour Economy minister famously once said that she regretted capitalism
