Types of Mediation: Choose the Type Best Suited to Your Conflict

It allows for a conversation that allows all parties to live up to their intentions to take good care of themselves and to interact with the other constructively. First described by Robert A. Facilitative Mediation In facilitative mediation or traditional mediation, a mediator attempts to facilitate negotiation between the parties in conflict.

Types of Mediation: Choose the Type Best Suited to Your Conflict

In mediation, a trained mediator tries to help the parties find common ground using principles of collaborative, mutual-gains negotiation. Have you used any of these types of mediation and did you find them effective? We support them in making their own choices about how they wish to respond to their conflict. Further, the center provided transformative mediation in all of the types of mediation provided that included civil court and family court cases in which many had specific requirements from the court with respect to the way that agreements were to be structured for enforceable court orders. As a transformative mediator, I would like to clarify the goal of this type of mediation. Court-Mandated Mediation Although mediation is typically defined as a completely voluntary process, it can be mandated by a court that is interested in promoting a speedy and cost-efficient settlement.
