Walden comes to mind as a companion, and in many ways Walden is the greater book. God giveth inward peace abundantly to him who loveth solitude; who gives his heart in secret to God, who prays frequently, who is employed in useful occupations, who feeds his soul with holy studies, and meditates lovinfully on the truths of salvation.

In very deed you are in error and deceive yourselves, ye who in the world find sweetness, ye for whom this present world is full of pleasantness; for none of these enjoyments are secure to you, and every day you draw nearer to death, and to the judgment of God. It was death, sorrow, hunger, exposure, and humiliation to a civilized people as were the Cherokees. There is a reason I rarely wear eye make-up.

Michael Rustigan, professor of criminology at San Francisco State University, said the same feelings that drive parents like the Lins are behind vigilante acts like that of Ellie Nesler, convicted of killing her son's accused molester in a rural courthouse in April 1993. However, my inaptitude as well as the anxiety springing from a multiplicity of affairs amongst other things the composition of some little works preclude the possibility of my assuming such an undertaking. Perhaps, this can also be true of Jewett's life full of female friendship and little hardship until she fell ill right before her passing.

The Dark Interval: Letters on Loss, Grief, and Transformation by Rainer Maria Rilke

My mother Ellen Rogers was one of the ones on this trail. Finally he had a band of brothers of the heart. If you never had a trial, how could you
