Exploring the future impact of technology on teaching and learning

Some are talking to their neighbors. The reliance on technology for learning leads to more money being funnelled to tech giants, and further issues emerge regarding dependence on technology for achieving curricular outcomes. When students participate in the rulemaking process, they feel ownership for their classroom code of conduct and develop a deeper appreciation for following the classroom rules.

As Diversity Grows, So Must We

They don't seem to care about their children's future. At the time of this writing, the Hawai'i Educational Policy Center, under the auspices of Act 151, is in the act of convening a task force of policy makers and early childhood education professionals to give direction to the future of early care and education in Hawai'i.
