Country Reports

The series includes reviews, involving an in-depth analysis of a country system leading to a set of policy recommendations backed by analysis. The review assesses the performance of Scottish schools, using PISA findings and national test and examination results.

History of Planning in the UK

Regretfully, the legality of these minor amendments was challenged in 2006 and the 'arse covering' advice to many local authorities is that any variation to a planning permission should require subsequent planning approval which would entail a lengthy resubmission and extra fees by the site owner with all the anguish and stress that entails.

Volume Information on JSTOR

The commentaries are simpler exercises than full reviews, largely descriptive but also including an assessment of strengths and challenges in the country system. The major components are well developed, in particular policies for student assessment, school evaluation and school system evaluation. Planning Policy Guidance Notes used to be the mainstay of providing extra information to the Council waffle but these are being replaced by Planning Policy Statements.

Benchmarking medieval economic development: England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, c.1290, Economic History Review

Curriculum for Excellence offers an inspiring and widely supported philosophy of education. We conclude by reflecting upon the limits of projects of state decentralization and spatial policy under a strong national economic growth orientation in addressing the governance of uneven development. Despite these strengths, there is still some way to go to establish an apprenticeship system in England to match those of the strongest countries.

Note that this information is in addition to the full country background reports provided by the six countries participating in the policy review: Austria, Denmark, Ireland, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden. It highlights the need for ensuring that schools are meeting the learning needs of all their students, building professional capital, developing a coherent assessment and evaluation framework, and defining and implementing policy with a longterm perspective. The series includes reviews, involving an in-depth analysis of a country system leading to a set of policy recommendations backed by analysis.
