Space and Security

The principle that everyone — from the individual to the State itself — is accountable to laws that are publicly promulgated, equally enforced and independently adjudicated, is a fundamental concept which drives much of the United Nations work.

International Security Dimensions of Space

The General Assembly may also discuss any question relating to international peace and security and make recommendations the Security Council is not currently discussing the issue. A better approach might involve a mix of several measures, such as being able to thwart aggression, reassurances to reduce the adversary's fears, and relationship-building.
