The Belt and Road project, for example, has been targeted from all kinds of research perspectives in Hong Kong humanities departments.

The state of the discipline: English studies

Those who continue through school are at significant risk of infection during or soon after completing their education. Academics with specialisms in English literature and language must likewise be very creative in terms of fitting those specialisms into the needs of communities in both Hong Kong and China — especially with the Chinese government now making more funding available to Hong Kong researchers. Hence, another feature of the moment is decolonising the curriculum.

David 2006 Education Is a Human Right! However, with many propositions including altering the pedagogic structure, implementing new assessment models, regulatory bodies, curricula restructuring and enhancing private and community led initiatives within Special Education Zones SEZs , it is crucial to evaluate whether these would have the intended consequences, and what, if any, would be the unintended consequences of these on school education. The consequences that need to be addressed by education systems include declining school enrolments, delayed enrolments, erratic attendance, poor attention and performance, higher dropout levels, and reversal of Education for All development gains in the sector. Indeed, we might feel grateful to the students exercised by these matters for raising the question at all.

The end of free college in England: implications for quality, enrolments, and equity

Asked if they would consider becoming English majors or minors, more than half said they would never consider English as a primary major, citing a perceived heavy workload, high expectations especially around writing ability or personal unsuitability. A course filled entirely with triple-decker tomes, however, is unlikely to attract big undergraduate enrolments.
