Proglacial lakes and the retreat pattern of the southwest Laurentide Ice Sheet across Alberta, Canada

In this paper, we utilize a geologically constrained shoreline projection method with a high resolution digital elevation model to reconstruct the evolution of the ice-marginal system along the southwest LIS during the last deglaciation.

Landslides in the Isolated Patches Permafrost Zone, Northeastern British Columbia (NTS Mapsheet 94G East Half)

The text outlines pertinent chronological control and discusses the paleoglaciology of the ice sheet, with attention to location and migration of ice divides, their attendant domes and saddles, and to ice streams, ice shelves, and mechanisms of déglaciation. Canadian Journal of Earth Sciences 2008;; 45 5 : 593—610. We have documented such events in the Halden Creek watershed, 60 km southeast of Fort Nelson.

Proglacial lakes and the retreat pattern of the southwest Laurentide Ice Sheet across Alberta, Canada

The core of Foxe Ice disintegrated at 7 ka but retreat and readvance of Foxe Ice remnants continued throughout the Holocene. Analyses of the basal sediments from Boone Lake show that two 14C ages greater than 12,000 yr B. The sediment record began around 12.

Landslides in the Isolated Patches Permafrost Zone, Northeastern British Columbia (NTS Mapsheet 94G East Half)

L'inlandsis se retire lentement de 18 à 13 ka, surtout le long les marges ouest et sud, mais à 13 ka sa configuration reste à peu près inchangée.
