Chichele, Henry 1362?

It is my wish that if the aforementioned William Osbarn is not content with what I have bequeathed him above, but instead harasses in any way my executors indicated below, or if William or anyone else on his behalf or in his name through any wiles, fraud, or trickery disturbs my feoffees in my above-mentioned manor, lands and tenements with appurtenances, or makes any legal claim to the manor, lands and tenements with appurtenances or any portion thereof, contrary to what is set down in my last will, then I wish that each and every of the above legacies that I have made to William be considered null and void. Fastolf had also chosen Welles as one of his feoffees-to-use in some of his Norfolk manors, along with Sir Henry Inglose, another distant relation of Welles; and that trio, along with others, were associated in a rent-collecting scheme in London's Dowgate ward.
