North Yorkshire History: Chapter 11. 1832: The year of the Cholera

The main bar is heated by a fireplace constructed of beach cobbles, and the fire burns oak off-cuts from the workshop next door. It then reverted to Arnald de Percy, his elder brother, with the exception of a carucate and a half, which William at his death in 1295 was holding of Arnald. There is a statement made in some histories of Cleveland that its former name was Baynarde; if so, it possibly may have been held under or granted by the Percys, of Kildale Castle who seem, by marriage into the family of de Brus, to have become possessed of large tracts of land in this part of Northumbria soon after the Norman conquest , to a family named Baynarde, sometime between 1063 and 1290 or so, and thus have been called Baynarde's estate at Crathorne.
