It has become a cultural resource charged with moral significance but for some users, including it is clearly a political buzzword that is practically devoid of real historical content or context. But 20th century history teaches a different lesson. The Prime Minister acted not alone as the head of the Government of which I am a member.

Hitler's desk set on which Munich pact was signed in 1938 put up for sale in online auction

This makes the central issue its political will to do so.

For Netanyahu and his American allies, it's always 1938, because if it's not 1938 and your opponents aren't Neville Chamberlain, then you're not Winston Churchill.

A Reassessment of the Munich Agreement

It requires active, positive efforts to achieve it. German fear of being overtaken by Russia became an obsession after the Bolsheviks seized power.

But instead they not only typically ignore Palestinian incitement but actually fund it, both in their individual contributions to the Palestinians and in their bankrolling of the Palestinians through the European Union. Tony Blair even set in motion plans for his very own Blair Force One, ordering two customised aircraft for the exclusive use of prime ministers, the Cabinet and the Queen.
